Re: Testimonial

Dear Ms. Livingston:

I am pleased to write this letter of testimony about Myles Corcoran.

I have known Myles for several years, since I first called upon him to be a consultant, and later an expert witness, in a defective construction case. Myles played a significant role in resolving many issues in the case. The case has not yet concluded.

Myles is well known as a construction consultant/expert witness and has a very positive reputation in the legal community as knowledgeable in his profession.

During our work together I have observed Myles work and interact, not only with our clients, but with the opposing expert and legal counsel as well. He has a conscientious and honest nature, but advocates well for the client. One of things I appreciate most about Myles is that he does not exaggerate or puff claims just to increase a claim for damages. In his professional opinion, if a claim has no merit, he will say so and stand by it. This lends credibility to the case and makes my job easier in representing the best for my client. There is not much an attorney dislikes more than an expert witness who waffles on issues or who has an ego that is bigger than the case.

I appreciate Myles' commitment to high standards and his ability to see the true issues and directly communicate in raising the issues and discussing conflicting opinions in a professional manner. Myles has been pleasant, reliable and honest to work with.

I would recommend Myles without any reservation. Thank you.

Sincerely,

Pamela C. Mathiesen
